More and More Schools Are Coming Online and Word About VELI Is Spreading Fast!

FAIRFIELD, NJ--(Marketwire - March 10, 2008) - Virtual Ed Link, Inc. (VELI) (PINKSHEETS: VRED) announces a special ceremony this Tuesday, March 11, 2008, to officially acknowledge the activation of the School Safety Management System for 3000 students in the South Colonie Central School District located in New York State's capital region.

Presidents from multiple community colleges will attend the event in preparation of bringing the Virtual Ed Link safety solution to 20,000+ other students on their respective campuses. Shareholders can expect to hear more soon about these new contracts with community college campuses.

Regional television and print media will also be in attendance at the event. The VELI website (<http://www.virtualedlink.org>) will be updated later this week with links to forthcoming media clips that highlight the Tuesday ceremony.

"Our goal of securing 250,000 registered users before June 2008 is quickly becoming a reality," commented Dr. Alan McCartney, Chief Operating Officer of VELI. "We are thrilled with the public exposure VELI is enjoying right now. With more and more schools coming online, the public interest is high and word about VELI is spreading fast. We would also like to thank some of our investors for already taking the initiative of making the school districts that they care about aware of our unmatched safety solution. We have already received responses from your efforts!"

CEO John Bay stated: "The 1.4M contract revenue projection before June 2008 is figured based on licensing and customization fees plus a $4.95 annual fee per registered user. With the demand high and new schools being alerted daily to our solution, we are now surpassing our expectations for growth in 2008."
